October is domestic violence prevention

Soriano

"Everyone in this community is responsible for assuring the safety of everyone who lives and works here."

Domestic violence prevention is crucial to the Army mission. Each October, we put a special focus on the prevention of domestic violence in the Army, to remind ourselves that this is a year-round mission.

This year, our theme is "Preventing Domestic Violence: It's Everyone's Duty." It is central to the Family Advocacy mission, which strives to achieve positive outcomes from "safety, self sufficiency, personnel preparedness, and community cohesion." From my perspective, family advocacy as it relates to domestic violence prevention is the responsibility of every individual at this installation.

Our commitment to domestic violence prevention is total. We want to prevent it from occurring in the first place and we will intervene decisively and effectively when it does occur. The twin slogans for this year's campaign spell it out in a dramatic way: "Prevent Domestic Violence: Preserve Domestic Tranquility." This reflects our conviction that prevention is the best strategy.

Many of our recent mobilizations have been driven by humanitarian concerns. Soldiers from the 10th Combat Support Hospital have just returned from Bosnia and the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment are preparing for deployment there next year. We have worked heroically to restore peace and tranquility in troubled places around the globe. We need to maintain tranquility in our own family lives so we are always ready and able to serve our country whenever we are called.

"Stopping Domestic Violence: It's Not Just a Good Idea — It's The Law." This reflects our commitment to intervene when prevention fails and when domestic violence occurs, to use the full weight of our authority to assure that we will move decisively to stop it from re-occurring.

Everyone in this community is responsible for assuring the safety of everyone who lives and works here. Self-sufficiency is only possible when all soldiers and families are strong and adaptable — positive assets to our Army.

The combination of thorough training and having your home in order is at the heart of what we mean by personnel preparedness. Soldiers, commanders, civilians and families all need to be committed to Army life in order to maintain community cohesion. When domestic violence occurs anywhere in the life of our community, it undermines our community and our mission. In domestic violence prevention, community cohesion is a driving force for us to form partnerships with civilian agencies off post.

The bottom line is that domestic violence prevention begins with you and every individual in the Mountain Post community. Our duty and responsibility call on us to succeed in this campaign against domestic violence and in favor of domestic tranquility. It is not just a good idea, it is the law.

We are fortunate to have an effective family advocacy program here on post. Please contact them if you or someone you know needs help (see box).

Mission first ... people always ... one team. Bayonet!

CFC kicks off at Fort Carson Tuesday

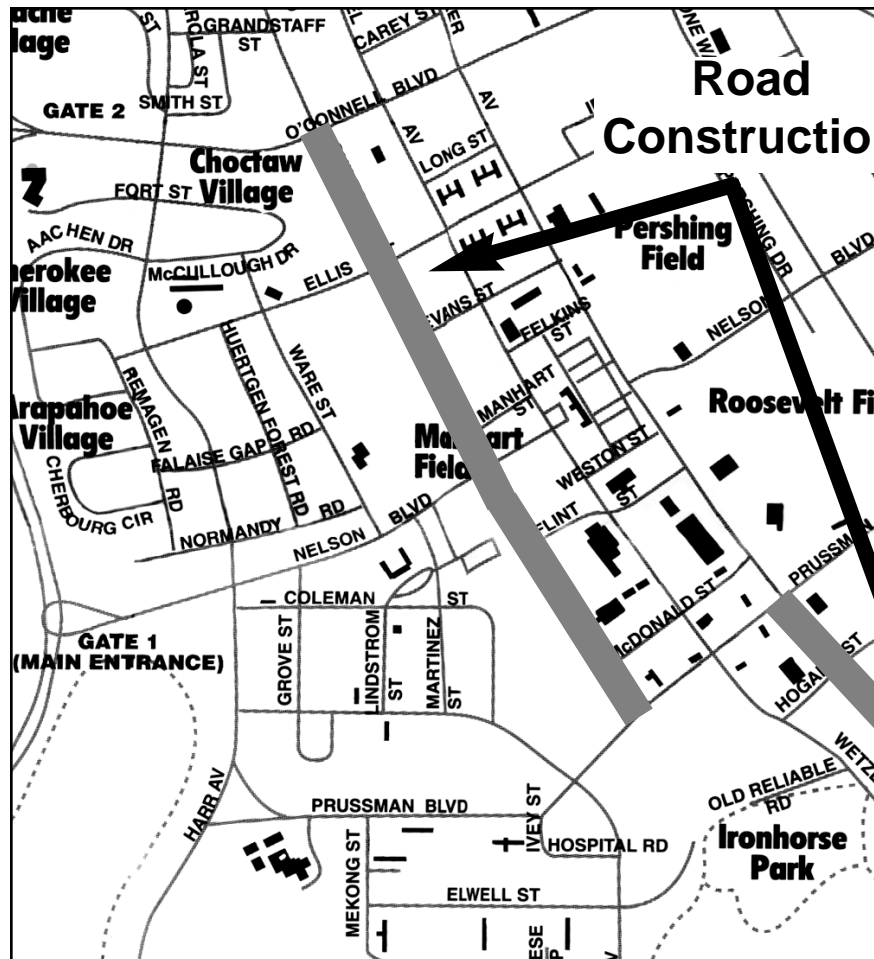

Fort Carson Public Affairs Office

The 1999 Combined Federal Campaign announces the Kick-Off Rally and Agency Fair for Fort Carson Tuesday at the Elkhorn Conference Center at Fort Carson starting at 10 a.m.

The CFC is committed to providing support and charitable dollars through a program that is employee-focused, cost efficient and provides all federal employees with an opportunity to improve the quality of life at home and abroad. Federal employees created the CFC — one campaign, once a year — which allows employees to control where their gift goes.

The Agency Fair follows the Kick-Off Rally at the Elkhorn Conference Center from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Many local, national and international voluntary agencies will have booths at the fair. Here is your chance to meet people who will share stories of how CFC dollars made a difference in the lives of real people.

Whether your choice is to make a difference with a child, comfort the dying, access to water in the Third World, environmental protection or support of cures for disease, your participation makes a difference. Join your colleagues at the Kick-Off Rally and Agency Fair Tuesday.

Road Construction ...

The Directorate of Public Works will be doing road construction between O'Connell and Prussman Boulevard and also on Prussman Boulevard and Polio Street. The work will be performed during the week of October 19-23, 1999. Detours will be provided. Traffic delays may occur.

Advancing his platoon during the St. Mihiel offensive, he was severely wounded in 4 places by the bursting of a high-explosive shell. Before receiving any aid for himself he dressed the wounds of his orderly, who was wounded at the same time. He then ordered and accompanied the further advance of his platoon, although weakened by the loss of blood. His right hand and arm being disabled by wounds, he continued to fire his revolver with his left hand until, exhausted by loss of blood, he fell and died from his wounds before aid could be administered.

Bikers rev up at safety c

by Pfc. Zach Mott

14th Public Affairs Detachment

All soldiers, Department of Defense civilian employees and anyone else hoping to ride a motorcycle within the confines of Fort Carson must attend a mandatory Motorcycle Safety Course prior to revving up their engines.

Prospective students have a choice when it comes to this class. They can either spend between $70 and $80 to attend a class downtown, or they can invest eight hours of their time at the Motorcycle Safety Course conducted monthly on post.

"How can you go wrong with free training?" said Reggie Butler, course instructor.

This course convenes at least one Tuesday monthly and begins at 7:30 a.m., and concludes at 4:30 p.m., but sign up early as space is limited to the first 12 people who pre-register by calling 526-2123.

The morning portion of the class consists of blocks of instruction on topics such as braking, cornering and swerving and concludes with a test. The afternoon is filled with practical exercises from the Motorcycle Operator Safety Training manual.

"In the morning I learned techniques, now I'm putting them to use," said Sgt. Nathan Apticar, 3rd Battalion, 10th Special Forces Group, prior to tackling his first corner during the Motorcycle Safety Course.

Butler said he recommends this course for people with at least six months of riding experience.

Other than the Mountain Post, Peterson Air Force Base also runs a Motorcycle Safety Course free of charge. At both locations the curriculum is the same, but Peterson AFB is for Air Force personnel and their DOD civilian employees, and Fort Carson is for Army personnel and their respective DOD civilian employees, said Butler.

One problem Butler said he notices about students attending his class is that they are skeptical of the need for it.

"Everyone can benefit from this course," he said. "A lot of people have a change of heart about the importance, once they've gone through the class."

The instructors are not there to just teach the text from the book, they are also there to aid individual riders on problems they are having. Butler said.

"We are here to

Upcoming class 15, March 14, April on attending a class 8044 or 526-2123.

There are a few must bring with their motorcycle, a driver's license, the vehicle's registration, leather boots, highly recommended cycle helmet.

Fire department hosts prevention p

Fire and Emergency Services

For the second consecutive year, the Fort Carson fire department has teamed up with the National Fire Protection Association, the official sponsor of Fire Prevention Week for nearly 80 years, and other fire departments across North America to execute the "The Great Escape" during Fire Prevention Week, Sunday through Oct. 9.

Launched by NFPA last fall, The Great Escape is a three-year effort to get more people to develop and practice a home fire escape plan. Results show the campaign is already working. The association documented nearly 250,000 families participating in The Great Escape last year, with 25 lives saved as a direct result.

Most people underestimate fire's power and speed. In the best case, you may have only one or two minutes to escape a typical home fire, said Jerry Morrison, Fire Inspector for the Fort Carson fire department. Home fire escape planning and practice is critical to life safety because they ensure that everyone knows how to use those minutes wisely and escape unharmed.

Fire escape plan entry forms will be distributed to all elementary school students on Fort Carson. Each student is asked to complete the form and escape plan. The original entries will then be collected Oct. 6 for judging. Local winners will be chosen from each grade level in each school.

Two entries will be chosen from Fort Carson and submitted to NFPA for the grand prize drawings in late October. Those winners will receive a trip for four to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

Parents are strongly encouraged to help complete the escape plan and entry form. When developing the home fire escape plan, the FCFD encourages all participants to use the mapping grid provided with the application. The application can also be picked up at the fire department, building 526, or call 526-2679.

Gulf War Illnesses Outreach Team to visit Fort Carson

by Spc. Cecile Cromartie
Mountaineer staff

A five-member team from the Office of the Special Assistant for Gulf War Illnesses is scheduled to visit Fort Carson from Oct. 18 to 22 as part of a national outreach campaign designed to build awareness of issues surrounding Gulf War illnesses.

The team will not only inform and address concerns of active duty military personnel, but also people in the National Guard and Reserve; retired and separated military personnel, Gulf War veterans, families and Department of Defense personnel.

"During the four days (of the visit), the team will be doing a series of briefings. These briefings are designed to address different audiences to include reserve components, to include family members, chain of command, soldiers and units. The briefings themselves are designed to address a number of audiences," said Col. Philip L. Wilkerson Jr., executive assistant, deputy to the Special Assistant to the Deputy Secretary of Defense for Gulf War Illnesses.

According to OSAGWI's second annual report, the outreach efforts were initiated in 1998 and since then have provided Under Secretary of the Army, Bernard D. Rostker, and his team with the chance to discuss several Gulf War concerns and issues with the Total Force. From Gulf War veterans to community groups, the office's outreach is directed to anyone who wants to listen.

"The purpose of the office is three-fold. First we are concerned and want to ensure that veterans and family members are aware of respective medical programs to address their medical concerns and issues. Second, we want to share what we have learned from the number of studies and series of evaluations and programs from the Gulf (War) and share that information with the Total Force and the general public. And third, we want to share lessons learned that have evolved out of these studies and programs so we might repeat those lessons in future developments," Wilkerson said.

An OSAGWI press release states that the team's briefings will be held at various locations on Fort Carson and will be open to family members and the general public. Topics for discussion will include DOD's force health protection efforts; investigation results on reported chemical or biological warfare events and potential environmental exposures and resources available to Gulf War veterans and their families.

"There's definitely a concern about medical treatment and care for the veterans and we address that. (The) DOD has worked hand in hand with the Veterans Affairs administration to address those particular medical concerns.

"There are two parallel programs. The DOD program is the comprehensive program. That program addresses medical concerns, physical and mental health concerns of Gulf War veterans both before and after the Gulf since that program is a parallel program is the Total Force program sponsored by the Veterans Affairs.

Because the information is shared with Gulf War veterans is shared with their families and information is shared with the general public. Outreach efforts have become an important part of the report said.

"On Thursday, the team (family members) will have a briefing at the McMahon Theater.

"That venue provides an opportunity for the general public to ask questions and concerns, which we'll try to address from the local VA and medical professionals and the general public," Wilkerson said.

More information on Gulf War illnesses can be found on the home page, <http://www.osagwi.mil>

Jim Collins and Jim Curry, of Indianapolis, are relining Fort Carson's indoor pool. They are with Natare, one of two companies that do this kind of work. The textured PVC pool-liner material is put in place over a felt base. This procedure gives the pool bottom a slight "give" when stepped on, and the textured liner is less slippery than a painted pool.

welded, as are the lane stripes.

"It really is cost effective and saves dollars," said Don Armes, Aquatics director.

Because there is not a lot of natural light in the indoor pool, Armes selected a pale ice-blue liner for the pool.

The outdoor pool was lined by Natare last year, and Armes is very pleased with the results.

Collins said he knows of pools that were lined by Natare 30 years ago and are still being used.

Collins has lined pools around the world. He has been to Japan and the Aleutian Islands to line pools. He lined a pool for the Secret Service and Bill Cosby, as well as city parks and military installations around the world.

Safety tips for icy conditions

Fort Carson Safety Office

There are many injuries due to slips and falls on ice each year. Every fall (no pun intended), the Safety Office puts out the following tips:

Don't let the first icy conditions of the winter season catch you off guard. Slow down and look for slippery areas.

When walking on ice, keep your body positioned slightly forward; put your feet down flat (not heel first); take short steps or move your feet forward without lifting them from the ground (a good analogy is walking like a penguin); and wear footwear that is appropriate for the weather.

Maintain walkways and steps to keep them free of ice and snow. Have "ice melt" and shovels on hand ahead of time. Post a roster for snow removal duty.

Snow shoveling is heavy work and requires proper techniques in order to avoid straining the heart and back. Select a lightweight shovel with a sturdy handle. Never attempt to lift more than you can handle. Place your feet apart to maintain your balance, bend at the knees and don't twist your body. Step in the direction each shovel of snow is thrown to avoid back strain. Whenever possible, push the snow instead of lifting or throwing it. Do not work to the point of exhaustion. If you run out of breath, take a break.

Place mats or rugs inside entryways to catch slush and water. Dry floors may help prevent falls inside buildings.

The quotation above reflects the theme of the 78th annual observance of American Education Week, "Students Today, Leaders Tomorrow." The American Legion and the National Education Association established American Education Week in 1921 as part of a campaign to draw attention to the educational needs of World War I draftees. The week is now celebrated the week before Thanksgiving. This year, Fort Carson's American Education Week will spotlight education as the foundation from which effective military training and leadership grow by sponsoring a post-wide essay contest.

The topic is "Why I Think Education is Necessary Today and Into the Millennium." The deadline for entries is Oct. 29.

Winners of the essay contest will be notified by Nov. 5. Awards will be presented at an MPTEC Open House Nov. 18. The top essay will be published in the Mountaineer during American Education Week, Nov. 14 to 20. The top eleven essay awards listed below:

CYS announces auditions for 'Alky'

Fort Carson Public Affairs Office

Fort Carson's Child and Youth Services' School of the Arts and Drug and Alcohol Division announce auditions for their joint Red Ribbon Week production of "Alky."

"Alky," a play about teens and alcohol, is by renowned playwright, Jerome McDonough who has written many plays about youths dealing with sensitive issues such as drug abuse, teen pregnancy and parental abuse.

Auditions are scheduled today from 4 to 6 p.m. at Fort Carson's McMahon Theatre, 1517 McDonald Street.

The auditions are open to all youth dependents (ages 11-20) of active duty or retired military, DOD employees and active duty soldiers under age 20.

All talent should bring a prepared one to three minute monologue or may choose to have one provided for them. Youths are asked to attend the entire two-hour auditions.

There is no fee for auditioning or participating in the production. Pre-registration is not necessary.

These productions about teens are performed by military teens for teens. Active duty military, under the age of 20, are also invited to participate in the production either as actors or technicians.

Performances will be held Oct. 29 during the day for local middle and senior high school students.

For more information, contact Jennifer Kelly at 382-3840 or Darrilyn Young at 526-1239.

'Dr. Love' to present workshops for Carson

Army Community Service

Army Community Service Family Advocacy Program welcomes Patricia Love to Fort Carson Oct. 14. In two special engagements, Love will conduct a workshop where she will present to professionals and couples material from the book she co-authored, "Hot Monogamy."

Love, a marriage and family therapist in Austin, Texas, is executive director of the Austin Family Institute and president of the International Association for Marriage and Family Counselors. She has appeared on such network TV shows as Oprah Winfrey, Donahue and the Today show.

For professionals attending the workshop from 9 a.m. to noon at the Elkhorn Conference Center. The death of passion often heralds the end of a marriage. Learn how to help couples create permanent change, deepened intimacy and enduring passion through education, information and exercises. Basic IMAGO principles will also be applied.

For couples attending the workshop from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Elkhorn Conference Center. Love will teach how to explore the connection between passion and intimacy and how to better communicate one's needs to a partner. Participants will also discover how to keep the fires of desire flaming in their relationship, while sending their satisfaction soaring.

Refreshments will be provided at both events, while on-site child care will be provided in the evening.

For more information or to register for either presentation, please contact ACS at 526-4590.

Fort Carson units need not wait until a Military Police Report is completed and signed to obtain a copy. There are several ways for commanders and first sergeants to obtain either the completed report, or portions of the report, for use in Uniform Code of Military Justice action.

If the unit commander or the first sergeant wants the completed report expedited and available for pickup, you can send a representative to the Provost Marshal Records Section, building 2700, room 135, and fill out a request for expedition of a specific report. Once this request is registered, the report will be completed, input into the database, signed and available for pickup 10 to 21 days after completion of the investigation by the patrolman or investigator. On a case by case basis, individual reports can be expedited to same-day or next-day depending upon the circumstances. Coordination must be made with the PM operations officer for these cases.

Food! We all enjoy it. We think about it when we're hungry, and even when we're not. We compile lists when we shop for it. We even find new ways to make it exciting when we go to prepare it. Food is an important, and I might add, vital part of our daily existence.

Just this past Sunday afternoon I took my son to get pizza for lunch. We chose the lunch buffet in order to avoid the ordeal of trying to decide what kind of toppings to have on the pizza. For you see, in our culture, the important part of the meal is what goes on top of the pizza, and not the pizza dough. Meat and starch are the staples of our diet. Bread simply supplements the main course.

However, not so in the Middle East, and, in oriental culture, bread is the principal food of their diet. In the Orient it has been estimated that three-fourths of the people live entirely upon either bread or upon that which is made from wheat or barley flour. For them, their lives depend upon the wheat and barley harvest. And so, "bread" is, in a very real sense, "sacred."

In the sixth chapter of the Gospel of John we find the account of Jesus feeding 5,000 people, with five loaves of barley bread and two fish. And, there were leftovers. Well, needless to say, the multitude began to view Jesus as their great food provider sent from heaven. No longer would they need to worry about the unpredictability of weather nor the grain harvest. Jesus could simply multiply the bread on hand to nourish and satisfy the hunger of an entire nation.

It was within this context that Jesus declared to a hungry nation "I am the bread of life." And, though he could have used bread, to nourish an entire nation, no one promised an even greater claim, "anyone who is hungry, and anyone who is thirsty." He speaks of satisfying mere physical hunger with the deepest hunger within. We can be satisfied forever. We can nourish our spiritual bodies. We can develop into the kingdom of God. We can be physically and spiritually satisfied.

Are you struggling? Are you seeking seemingly no answer? Can you provide you with the bread of life? Turn to Jesus Christ. He is the bread of life.

Soldiers finish Bradley training

by 2nd Lt. Steven J. Norris
1st Battalion, 12th Infantry

Delta Company Death Dealers, 1st Battalion, 12th Infantry was definitely “fired up” when conducting its Bradley Fighting Vehicle Section and Squad Exercise.

Its mission was to knock out two enemy bunkers designed in a trenchline system and prepare for a possible counterattack. Each platoon was given a real-life scenario of an enemy threat on Fort Carson. The Bradley sections and squads developed and communicated an internal plan for their mission. To ensure their mission would be safe and successful using live ammunition, the exercise was divided into crawl, walk and run phases.

The platoons rehearsed the mission in the “walk phase” until the company commander, Capt. Kevin P. Wolfla, felt they were safe and ready to use live ammunition in the “run phase.”

Each platoon operated day and night missions. 1st Lt. Brian Compton, 2nd platoon leader said, “The exercise makes sections and squads appreciate the combat power of mounted and dismounted forces working together on the battlefield.”

The Bradley section and squad mutually supported each other to maximize combat power.

“The entire exercise provided a great opportunity for section and squad leaders to finetune planning, execution, and leadership skill,” said Staff Sgt. Joseph J. Snell, 1st Platoon.

The exercise was a success and provides a strong foundation for the Bradley sections and squads. Delta Death Dealers will finetune their lessons learned to prepare for the next exercise, Warrior Focus.

"Trucking it to the top" is one motto the 2nd Transportation Company could use after winning the Forces Command National Defense Transportation Unit of the year.

The reason for the win is the whole unit concept, said 1st Sgt. Michael Robinson, 2nd Trans.

"It's soldiers being conscious of doing things and every one of them (soldiers noncommissioned, officers and officers) contributing. It's keeping the lowest (ranking) soldier informed about what safety is all about," said Robinson.

The award was based on several factors such as the unit safety record — driving more than 1 million miles accident free; the unit safety award for the year for post; being 1,000 days free of soldiers absent-without-leave; and the highest physical training average in the battalion, he said.

With the unit being named the best FORSCOM transportation company, one might think the unit would let its guard down once the competition was over. That's not the case with this company. Just as with every mission in the past, a unit safety briefing is conducted before every mission and input about safety is given for the mission.

It really doesn't matter if input is from the lowest or the highest enlisted soldier, input of any kind is appreciated and wanted if it will make the mission better, said Robinson.

These Heavy Equipment Transport crews are made up of a junior enlisted soldier and a non-commissioned officer. They are responsible for all maintenance, tie-down of equipment and driving, said Staff Sgt. Jimmy Hubbard, training NCO. For the most part the drivers are NCOs, because of all the requirements needed to obtain a license.

The first step is getting licensed on the smaller vehicles: a "Humvee," a two-and-a-half ton and a five-ton truck. After that, the soldiers are recommended for a HET board to see if they are ready to receive a driving permit, said Hubbard.

"To get the permit, they have to first go through an 80-hour course," said Hubbard.

Then the soldiers are required to drive a certain number of hours with different vehicles on the HET, which allows them to go back to the board to obtain a license to drive the HET. This whole process is done so the unit knows the drivers behind these HETs are qualified to get the job done right, said Hubbard.

Training is important because more than 400 missions are accomplished throughout the year, said Robinson.

Robinson credits the success of the unit on "having the best soldiers, NCOs and officers in the U.S. Army."

Military intelligence lends realism to

Company C, 104 Military Intelligence

"Serbs go home! Serbs go home!"

A large crowd gathers around their leader, confronting the Americans and preventing them from entering the village. A man angrily throws down his hat in protest of the American presence.

A scene from CNN, you ask? It is, in fact, a scene from the recently constructed village of "Maglaj," downrange at Fort Carson.

Soldiers from Company C, 104th Military Intelligence Battalion, along with other soldiers from the 4th Engineer Battalion, rehearsed a scenario Aug. 24 that the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment will face during their squadron and troop lanes for Stabilization Forces 7th Rotation.

In the village of Maglaj, each troop must safely escort a group of "Serb" refugees who wish to visit the grave sites of their ancestors. In order to do this, the refugees must face a mob of angry "Bosnians" who fear the Serbs will try to take back their homes.

Warrant Officer Eugene Brown, a counter-intelligence technician in 104th MI Bn., plays the leader of the mob. As the community leader, it is his job to rally the crowd and block the SFOR convoy. Unfortunately for the SFOR, Brown will only allow the convoy to pass if the local police get involved. Therefore, the SFOR commander must negotiate with the local mayor through his interpreters.

Captain Mike Hatmaker, commander of Company C, 4th Eng. Bn., acts as the mayor. He, too, does not make the SFOR commander's job easy. In fact, he initially refuses to see the SFOR commander and then demands that the Serbs remain only for a limited time.

Yet, the SFOR commander must successfully negotiate before he can safely escort the refugees through the village. Even after the local police push the mob to the sides of the street, Brown and his crew continue to protest the Serb presence. Only after the SFOR safely escorts the Serbs to the grave sites and out of the village is the mission considered a success.

An angry mob protests the "Serb" presence in "Maglaj Village."

Company C, 1st Battalion 12th Infantry prepares 3rd ACR for

It was a cold and rainy day in the town of "Brcko, Republika Srpska," and around town people went about their day. Farmers tended their fields, each breath clearly visible in the brisk morning air.

Police officers patrolled the streets with thick mud clinging to their boots.

Inside the café, the fortunate enjoyed a hot cup of coffee while outside sat a destitute mother tending her baby and begging for change.

Across the street, behind a barbed wire fence, two "Serbian" soldiers resolutely stood guard over the Brcko weapons storage site.

Suddenly the drab town's routine was shattered by the sound of diesel engines announcing another Security Forces Patrol. The curious peeked from the windows, while others, more outraged at the foreign intervention, gathered for a confrontation with the Americans.

It is the mission of C Company, 1st Battalion, 12th Infantry to establish a situational training exercise lane to train platoons from 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment on the task of inspecting a weapons storage site.

Each day, two different 3rd ACR platoons execute the lane on two separate occasions. Each iteration forces the platoons to react to unconventional problems.

At the weapons storage site, Sgt. Jesus Silva, of the 49th Armored Division, Texas National Guard, portrays the commander of the storage site. In one iteration with a platoon, he is very compliant and helpful, but the next time the same platoon comes through it is met with a starkly different attitude.

Silva becomes extremely agitated, and in-compliant with the platoon leader's requests, thus catching the platoon leader off guard and forcing him to approach the situation more delicately.

This training began in mid-August and will continue through the beginning of October. The soldiers of Charlie Company and Headquarters, Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 12th Inf., Charlie Co., 64th Forward Support Battalion and the 49th Armored Division, Texas Army National Guard, live and work at the Fort Carson Military Operations in Urban Terrain site to provide the most realistic scenario possible.

It is time to start thinking about your tax situation. Will you owe, or will you get paid back? Have you claimed all the exemptions you should? Whether you have or not, make sure you file on time.

Filing taxes on time

Why is it so important that you file forms or payments on time?

So that you don't have additional penalties and interest applied to your tax liability.

The following are brief explanations and penalties for late filing and late payment. Let's begin with the common issues of filing your individual tax return late or not paying your taxes on time. These are considered to be separate penalties by the Internal Revenue Service.

Failure to pay penalty

The failure to pay penalty is half a percent of the tax due for each month (or part of a month) the payment is late with a maximum penalty of 25 percent of the tax due.

For example, if your payment is two months late and your return shows that you owe $5,000, the penalty is 1 percent, which equals $50.

Failure to file

The failure-to-file penalty is 5 percent of the tax due per month (or partial month) late, to a maximum of 25 percent.

The IRS may excuse you from penalties if your failure to file or pay is due to a reasonable cause. These types of excuses include death or serious illness in the immediate family or postal irregularities.

The bottom line is, file your taxes on time. Don't let the additional penalties make your financial situation even worse. If you are not able to pay the amount that is due, contact your command financial noncommissioned officer for information about other options you may have before it's too late.

32nd Transportation wins pigskin

by Walt Johnson
Mountaineer staff

Jerreese "Big Sexxy" Blue, 32nd Transportation Company coach, said his team has the attitude of going out to the games to "just have some fun." Well, they had a lot of fun Monday night as they defeated the 360th Transportation Company, 24-16, in the Mountaineer "Game of the Week" Monday night at the Mountain Post Sports complex.

They followed that victory with another win over the 60th Ordnance (19-6) to cap off a big evening.

In the game of the week, the 32nd was pushed for all it was worth by a game with an undermanned 360th team. The 32nd team seemed to have more athletes, more size and more speed than the 360th but the 360th kept this game close. It seemed to have as much or more heart than the 32nd team. Having heart was the key in this game as the 360th had a number of opportunities to turn tail and run but did just the opposite. They stood and fought like an army unit trying to save a hill from the enemy.

The 32nd got on the board first as Floyd Johnson, taking a pass over the middle from quarterback John Hale on his 30-yard line, turned and rumbled down the field for a 38-yard touchdown run. The extra point was missed so the score was 6-0, at this point.

The 32nd forced a punt and seemed to be gaining some momentum as they took the ball on offense.

However, the 360th gave the first sign they were not about to go away without a fight as Chris Cazier stepped in front of a Hale pass and returned it 21 yards to the 32nd's three-yard line. On the first play after the interception, 360th quarterback Lionel Jacobs found Shawn Triplett in the left corner of the end zone to tie the game at six apiece. Jacobs then found Wesley Wilcox for the two-point conversion and the 360th had an 8-6.

It looked like the 32nd was going to come right back down the field and score, but the drive was stalled by good 360th defense. Jacobs and his team now had a chance to put some distance between themselves and the 32nd, but Jacobs was intercepted by Isaiah Cooper who took the ball on the 10-yard line and ran into the left corner of the end zone for the go-ahead points for the 32nd. The 32nd again missed the extra point but now had a 12-8 lead.

Now, the 32nd defense stepped up and stopped the 360th, giving the ball back to the 32nd. But, time ran out in the half before any points could be added.

The 32nd started the second half

32nd Transportation quarterback John Hale, center, looks just before engineering the team's second touchdown like it had every intention of blowing the game open. The 32nd got the ball first and struck quickly for a score as Hale hit Nathaniel Legore with a 42-yard touchdown pass to give the 32nd an 18-8 lead. The 32nd may have thought it took the heart out of the 360th at this point but Jacobs and his mates had another thought in mind.

Jacobs dropped back to pass and found his coach Jack Walker on the left sideline for what appeared to be a 15-yard gain. Walker spun out of the reach of one defender, tightroped the sideline, and then avoided two more defenders on his way to a 63-yard catch-and-run touchdown.

Jacobs and Walker hooked up again for the game.

No matter how hard the 360th tried to make the game a close one, the 32nd was too good for them.

St. John's Hale ended the game with a touchdown on a 16-yard pass to M. Morehead.

Morehead was in the end zone when he was hit by Hale's receiver, who was thwarted by the 360th's defense.

Cycling class good for young and old

by Walt Johnson
Mountaineer staff

Editor's note: I went to the Post Physical Fitness Center Friday night to take part in a spinning class. I'll share my experience with you in next week's issue of the Mountaineer.

If you go by the Post Physical Fitness Center Monday through Friday at 5 and 6 p.m., you will see one of the most exciting and healthy classes offered for members of the Mountain Post.

But, you won't just see a bunch of young and want-to-be-young soldiers sweating and riding the cycles to great tunes. You will also see the very young and the older generation (40 and older) getting a great workout also.

One person who says he can't get enough of the workouts is 52-year-old retiree Lamont Spencer, who has been a regular at the classes.

"I come to the class because it has two immediate benefits for me. It stretches and lengthens the muscles. It also helps increase my cardiovascular strength and gives me more stamina."

Spencer said he comes to the class to stay in shape because it is more important now than ever.

"As you get older, the muscles get tighter so I want to lengthen and strengthen my muscles. Muscles are like rubber. If rubber doesn't stretch, then it will harden and crack and your muscles are the same. If you need energy and endurance, programs like this will be of great benefit to you."

The new spinning classes are free for active duty members and their families, retirees and their families, and Department of Defense civilians working on the post.

Officials ask anyone planning to take the class to remember to bring a water bottle and wear proper clothing.

Time still remains to sign up for football to

by Walt Johnson
Mountaineer staff

If your unit is interested in playing in the Columbus Day football tournament sponsored by McKibben Physical Fitness Center, contact your unit's PFC and sign up. Time is running out for registration and the tournament brackets must be formed. Anyone who needs information on the tournament should contact Lenwood Jordan, McKibben PFC director at 526-5152.

I spoke with the 759th Military Police's Dwayne Wooten the other day, and you'll be reading more about him next week. He said it's time to give the Oakland Raiders some ink.

Now, growing up, there were only two teams that I did not like — that team from Texas and the Raiders. But my dislike for the Raiders does not even approach the passion I have for the team from Texas so I will say this about the "Pride and Poise Boys," (that's the Raiders nickname) they are the early season surprise to me. They have beaten two of the National Football Conference Central Division teams, Chicago and Minnesota, and should have beaten a third member of that group, Green Bay, on opening day. Before the season, if you said the Raiders would be in the playoffs, you might have been committed to a mental institution. Now it doesn't seem to be that much of a reach.

No one was fortunate enough to qualify for the $20,000 grand prize at Saturday's "Shot of the Century" program, but boy, did the contestants have some fun on the golf course.

The closest anyone came to the hole was Paul Roop whose shot was five feet away from the magic 20-foot mark. Ted Kibel actually had the closest shot of the day at 8 feet 7 inches, but that was after the contest when the guys were just "horsing" around and having a good time.

I went to the youth soccer field Saturday to get a look at the soccer program.

What I saw was just the cutest thing you would want to see. The youth center has the normal soccer program for children age 6 and up, but you need to go there on a Saturday morning and watch the "little guys," age 4, play the game of soccer. I couldn't get over how coordinated the little people were on the field and they had so much fun. They are playing the game for fun and loving every minute of it. Check them out if you can.

I can't wait to share with you a story about the World Class Athlete Program head boxing coach Basheer Abdullah in the coming weeks.

Abdullah was named the assistant coach of the U.S. Olympic Boxing team for the 2000 Olympics, and was named the development coach of the year by U.S.A. boxing but that is only part of the story. This is truly a deserving award for a first class person, but I think you will be more than interested in the rest of the story.

You didn't think I would leave you without reminding you that the Arizona Cardinals are my favorite team this week did you?

The Cardinals head for Dallas to put a "whupping" on that "that team from Texas" just like they did in the playoffs last year.

I don't know about you but I don't think I like this parity thing in the NFL all that much.

About the only parity I see is mediocrity from every club in the NFL, not just the bad teams. Parity keeps good teams from making moves that separate them from the bad teams.

Highlight of the Week ...

Carrie Jones, Company C, 104th Military Intelligence, is one of the Fort Carson Youth Center soccer program. She is shown here on the Youth Center soccer field Saturday. Her volunteer work makes it possible for Fort Carson to participate in organized athletic events.

A painting by Impressionist Berthe Morisot, from The National Gallery, London, is part of the collection on display in the Denver Art Museum.

Impressionist art displayed in

Denver Art Museum

Impressionist paintings collected by European Museums are on exhibit in the Denver Art Museum Oct. 2 to Dec. 12.

The largest exhibition of impressionist works ever presented in the Rocky Mountain region features 58 works borrowed from 33 museums in 13 European countries.

Highlights of the exhibition include "The Sisters," by Mary Cassatt, "Woman Playing the Guitar," by Pierre-Auguste Renoir, and "Self-Portrait with Straw Hat," by Vincent van Gogh.

Museum goers will see many familiar works including "Before the Performance," by Edgar Degas; and "The Cliff at Fecamp," by Claude Monet.

Lesser known are the female artists who were active in the movement, including American-born Cassatt.

Impressionism is the title given to the art painted by a group of men and women who worked in Paris during the late 1800s. These artists broke old rules of painting by using new colors which were bright and contrasting. They also used new ideas, painting casual scenes from the world around them, such as boating, dancing and countryside scenes. These artists used new methods, often painting outdoors rather than in studios. They used new paints and quick, bold brush strokes to capture an "impression" of what they saw.

The impressionist masterpieces were not well received in their own time.

When the impressionists first exhibited their paintings in the 1870s, critics ridiculed the movement. The general public was outraged at such radical artistic techniques.

However, during the past 50 years impressionism has become immensely popular.

Fortunately, forward-looking European museums and individual collectors built their collections of impressionist art in spite of the public outcry. At the time, the artists were perhaps only a step or two away from eviction; today their paintings are worth millions.

Pierre-Auguste Renoir's "Woman Playing a Guitar" is part of the Impressionist collection in Denver.

Claude Monet's "The Cliff at Fecamp" is on display at the Denver Art Museum through Dec. 12.

The Impressionism collection being shown at the Denver Art Museum came from such museums as The National Gallery in London; the Aberdeen Art Gallery and Museum in Scotland, the Staatsgalerie in Stuttgart, Germany, and the Musee d'Orsay in Paris. The Impressionism: Paintings Collected by European Museums is organized by the High Museum of Art, Atlanta, in collaboration with the Denver Art Museum and the Seattle Art Museum. The Denver Art Museum is the final site for the exhibition. The works will then be returned to their European museum homes.

Tickets are now on sale. Advance tickets will be issued for a specific date and entry time and are non refundable. Tickets can be purchased by calling (888) 9030ART, or at the museum's box office. Same-day tickets, if available, can be purchased at the box office.

A painting by Paul Gauguin's "Still Life with Oranges" is one of 58 pieces at the Denver Art Museum.

Tickets for adults are $12.75 Tuesday through Friday; $14.75 on weekends. Senior citizens and students with ID are $9.75 any day. Children ages 6 to 18 are admitted for $6. Children age 5 and under are admitted free.

"The Sisters" was painted by American Impressionist Mary Cassatt.

A self-guided audio tour may be rented for $5, and is available in an adult or junior version. The hours for viewing Impressionism have been extended. The exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday. Wednesday through Friday the exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. On Saturday and Sunday, the exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The museum is closed Mondays and Thanksgiving Day. The Denver Art Museum is located at 13th Avenue and Acoma Street, just south of the Civic Center. Parking is available in lots south of 13th Avenue between Broadway and Acoma. A gift shop is located in the museum, as is a snack bar and restaurant. The snack bar opens at 11 a.m. A special collection of gifts featuring impressionist themes will be set up near the special exhibit. For more information about the museum, try the Web site www.denverartmuseum.org or call (303) 640-4433. An impressionist side note is the re-creation of Claude Monet's garden in the Denver Botanic Gardens. The re-created garden features a pool, lilies, water plants and a bridge, reminiscent of the gardens featured in some of Monet's paintings. After seeing the Impressionist exhibit, you might want to stop by the Botanic Gardens at 1005 York St., east of downtown. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, October through April.

Botanic Gardens' winter admission is $4.50 for adults, and $2 for students ages 6-15. Children 5 and younger are admitted free of charge.

To reach the Denver Art Museum from Fort Carson, take Interstate 25 north to Denver, taking the Colfax exit to downtown Denver.

"Le Pont de l'Europe," by Gustave Caillebotte, is from the art museum in Geneva.
